Hello, I’m Chloe Capital Letter!
I’m important because I come at the start of sentences.

Remember to include me for:

The first word of every sentence.
It is hot today.

The names of streets, roads, towns, countries, rivers, lakes, days of the week and months.
John Street, Perth, Australia, Monday

All first names and surnames.
Benny Smith
Mary Rose

The pronoun ‘I’
Hi, I’m Freddy Full Stop!
I’m important because I mark the longest pause in reading.

Remember to include me when you want to:

Show the end of a sentence (but don’t use me for questions or exclamations).

The fireman has lost his helmet.

Show initials.
M. I. Smith
R. C. Jones
K. Benn

Show abbreviations.
e.g.
Remember to include me when you want to:

Let the reader know when to pause.

Michael Jordan, a great athlete, played basketball for the Chicago Bulls.

Separate words or phrases in a series.

I ate bacon, eggs, toast, and tomato for breakfast.

Separate a quotation (speech marks) from the rest of the sentence.

"We must all try harder," yelled the coach.

Hi, I'm Connie Comma!
I'm important because I show where to pause.

Hi, I’m Quincy Question Mark!
I’m important because I mark when you want to ask a question.

Remember to include me for:

Direct questions.
What is your name?
How old are you?

Statements that are really questions.
You really are ready?
Hi, I’m Ellie Exclamation Mark!

I’m important because I can show when you have a strong feeling, such as excitement or surprise.

Remember to include me:

To show strong feelings.

“How handsome he looked in that suit!”

After an exclamation beginning with what or how.

“Stop!” “Help!” “What a beautiful dress!”

After an interjection.

Oh wow! Hurray!
